

ABSTRACT

A water distribution system for wetting an evaporative media pad includes a nozzle spraying a stream of water onto a water distributor that diverts the stream into at least two different portions. A plurality of 5 fingers extend in at least two different directions to direct the two portions onto different locations of the media pad.